Kirihana

> <meta name="Author"> Kirihana A/N: To the tune of "Sumahama" by the Beach Boys. Kirihana is the Japanese name of a feminine-looking Grass-type PokÃ©mon who appears in PokÃ©mon Gold/Silver. I don't know its English name, or whether it's as strong as I make it out to be in this song. I would have put real Japanese lyrics where they go in this song, but I couldn't find a free online translator that did Japanese! :-(And about the part where Kirihana asks her trainer some questions - I only said she asked. I didn't say the trainer answered, so please don't correct me. :P And I think it's okay for Kirihana to address her trainer as "Mama;" she doesn't know any better. Also, I consider the fifth verse a flashback to around the time of the third verse. :-)
>On with the song...

Kirihana,
>There's a PokÃ©mon in old Japan,
>Where a trainer walking on the sand
>Went and captured Kirihana.

Kirihana,
>Born a lovely Oriental flower,
>Just discovering her PokÃ©-power,
>Asked some questions of her trainer.

"Tell me, tell me, Mama,
>Will you ever catch some friends for Kirihana?

>Just look around out there
>And choose between Electric, Fire and Water, >and Grass like Kirihana."

Kirihana,
>In the autumn when the leaves are falling,
>One can almost hear the trainers calling
>Out commands to Kirihana.

Kirihana,
>Years have passed and you have grown in strides.
>Any trainer surely would take pride
>In one as strong as Kirihana.

"Tell me, tell me, Mama,
>Will you teach some attacks to Kirihana?
>It's no fun, but it's fair
>That I can't learn Electric, Fire or Water, >just Grass like Kirihana."

(Japanese Verse)

(Japanese Verse)

Kirihana,
>There's a PokÃ©mon in old Japan,
>Where a trainer walking on the sand
>Went and captured Kirihana.
